

SKY & CLOUD

VIRTUAL EXHIBITION CATALOG

EXHIBITION NOTE

Sky and Clouds follows a subject that never holds still. The sky changes constantly, even when the shift feels almost invisible. Clouds form, move, dissolve, and return in new shapes. What appears steady is always in motion.

The works in this exhibition respond to that movement in different ways. In some, clouds and light remain clear enough to follow, holding onto a sense of form. In others, edges soften, and the focus moves toward colour, atmosphere, and feeling. This movement between clarity and looseness runs through the entire exhibition.

The sky carries a strange balance. It feels close enough to see in detail, yet always remains out of reach. That distance creates space for imagination, memory, and emotion to enter. Clouds add to this, never settling into one shape, always becoming something else.

Each work feels like part of a moment rather than a finished image. There is no fixed point where everything comes together. Instead, there is a sense of something ongoing, something still unfolding. This allows the viewer to enter without needing to find a single meaning.

Moving through the exhibition brings small shifts in feeling. One image may create a sense of openness, another may feel more contained or layered. These changes do not need explanation. They mirror how the sky is experienced over time, always present, always changing.

Sky and Clouds remains open, much like the subject itself. What stays with the viewer may be small, just a colour, a shape, or a feeling.
